MAINTAINING AND PROTECTING

Many of the fine churches in Ireland have superb stained glass Windows, depicting events both in Christianity and social development over time.

Between the destructive forces of nature and the destructive forces of man, there is a current focus on security and protection.

Over the years parishes across the country have invested a lot of money to protect stained glass windows by installing storm force glass panels outside but over time this protective glass becomes dirty and in most cases is impossible to clean without removing the panel which would be very costly.

Once stained glass becomes dirty the amount of light that can shine through is reduced, its beauty is also reduced, and if the build up of dirt and grime is heavy enough the light cannot pass through and the stained glass takes on a dull dreary look.

THE PROCESS

Now available is a revolutionary process for removing cobwebs, dirt and grime from inside stained glass window and protective outer panels without removing the panel and restoring it to its original clarity.

Distilled water is our main cleaning agent which is recommended by all stained glass conservator experts, along with special tools and equipment used by our trained technicians. As stained glass windows becomes fragile with age so attention and care is taken to restore both windows which results in a transformation to their former beauty allowing light to shine through once again. There are two options for cleaning the stained glass window inside the church or building depending on age and state of window. We would make recommendations based on a survey.

Our Company only cleans stained glass windows that are in a good stable condition; loose or unstable windows will be untouched and a report with photograph will be given of our findings as we do not repair or replace stained glass windows. We would recommend a stained glass approved conservator Company to carry out repair or replacement.

QUOTATION

We offer a free quotation and a detailed estimate with digital photograph of each stained glass window and photographs of any damaged windows visible during our survey.

The Company has a combined liability insurance policy. Details available on request

BENEFITS

- Restoring the beauty of stained glass windows.
- Prolong the life of the windows by removing debris and plant growth especially windows that are close to shrubs as over time these would grow bigger and damage both units.
- Restoring the clarity of light which once shone through.
- Parishioners will notice the difference inside and outside.
